EXCERPTS FROM REVIEWS

"Chamberlain played a carefully delivered sequence from Bach's Well Tempered Klavier – the first four preludes and fugues. Effortless in their fluency, the collection made its strongest impression in the C sharp fugues, the whole complex of eight works treated with Chamberlain's usual calm and considerable scholarship."

The Age, June 19, 2008.

"Chamberlain performed American composer Donald Freund's Feux d'artifice Tombeau, a searing lament commemorating the Challenger disaster of 1986. Despite its sectional nature, this ballad speaks clearly of a fierce loss and a hard-achieved state of reconciliation in a thunderously contemporary language, the whole conveyed by Chamberlain with high virtuosity and ardent responsiveness"

The Age January 30, 2006.

"Robert Chamberlain produced some of the most memorable sounds of the day from a magnificent Hornung 1870 square piano in three of Schumann's simply crafted but poignantly felt Albumblätter Op. 99."

The Adelaide Advertiser, May 18, 2005.

"The following Beethoven D major Sonata Op. 28 was one of the evening's major works. The pianist generated a mobile character for this summery optimistic piece, aiming for calm and restraint, even if the powerful surges of the opening and middle two movements came across without dynamic compromise.

... the Etude -Tableaux in E flat from Op. 39 set by Rachmaninoff came closest to deluging the listener with its force. "

The Age, February 3, 2004.

"... Trio Erytheia – Isin Cakmakcioglu (violin), Rachel Atkinson (cello) and Robert Chamberlain (piano) - handled the tight sight lines to give a committed performance of very diverse music. This ensemble is making a name for itself in the new-music field. At last, Melbourne has a group that maintains a focus in that specialised area rather than instrumentalists coming together for a concert and then dispersing”

The Age, October 28, 2003.

“A beautifully played and recorded recital of music old and new for violin and piano from Australia's Tall Poppies imprint.”

“Marsden and Chamberlain's performance here is pretty much ideal”. (Grieg Violin Sonata in F major, Nielsen violin Sonata no. 1

Neil Horner, a UK website review, October 2003

(<http://www.musicweb.uk.net/classrev/2003/Oct03/marsden.htm>)

“An important indication of the success of this performance (Martinu Sonata for flute & piano) came in the finale's hectic rhythmic interplay between the two instruments. These are pages that sit on a knife edge and require mutual confidence and fearlessness – on this occasion handled with laudable accuracy.”

The Age, February 4, 2003.

“Now re-published by Currency Press, there is no doubt that this version of the Violin Sonata will become the definitive edition of this beautiful work and congratulations must be paid to the editors for achieving their goal of restoring the work in such fine detail”

Dr Rita Crews, review of Sutherland Violin Sonata edition edited by M Marsden and R Chamberlain, The Studio (MTA Association) Vol. 7 No. 2, May 2001.

“Full house audience for top Aussie musicians”

“The duos masterful interpretation of the dramatic sonata....The audience was captivated by the dreamlike ambience....It was pure heaven, a night to remember for all who came”

New Sabah Times (Malaysia), May 2000

“...Marina Marsden and Robert Chamberlain bring great understanding and empathy to the [Margaret Sutherland Violin] sonata...The improvisational nature of this darkly brooding music is drawn out with finesse and assured control by both artists.”

“a highly atmospheric piece which Marsden and Chamberlain capture to perfection... a gem of its kind and is here played with utmost fervour and refinement.”

“Margaret Sutherland is well served by performers who show a great affinity with her music and at the same time play stylishly and expressively.”

Stringendo Vol. 22 no. 1 (March 2000)

“...allowing Mr Chamberlain to bring his commanding technique and vision to the service of truly great music. This was compelling playing, delivering a kaleidoscope of original ideas with the full range of power, control and subtlety required.”

The Border Mail (Albury NSW) September 1999

“The two piano team of Len Vorster and Robert Chamberlain are persuasive interpreters of the composer’s reductions of these massive orchestral tapestries, (Holst The Planets) and this well recorded disc has brought me increasing pleasure in several re hearings.”

American Record Guide 11-12/98

“...this expert, uptempo performance, with its astringent sound and its finely tuned attention to the clockwork ostinatos and repetitions, makes an excellent choice...”

Fanfare Magazine (USA), November/December 1998

“Marsden joins with pianist Robert Chamberlain to give an engrossing account of the Violin Sonata (1925). ... Both performers plumb its emotional depths with surety and rejoice in its chameleon-like changes of mood and colour.”

The Age, October 1998

“Accompanied here by the first-class pianist Robert Chamberlain...”

Bremer Magazine (Germany) February 1996

“This is a wonderful recital, full of passion, fire and the joy of life.”

The Australian, April 1996

“The reading of L’Invitation au Voyage was close to ideal: a sparsely coloured, carefully spun series of long phrases from the singer and a subtle underpinning from Chamberlain that made a tellingly accomplished foil for the tenor. ...this song’s achievement shone out due to the calm authority shown by both young musicians”

The Age, July 1997

“In both works the pianist Robert Chamberlain was an admirable partner. He established driving momentum and evoked a rich palette of orchestral colouring.”

Herald Sun, September 1996

“the Nielsen Sonata No 2 was excellently accomplished, a riveting experience for those of us who were hearing it for the first time.”

The Age, July 1996

“Robert Chamberlain’s piano provides a strong yet sensitive foil to the formidable range and strength of emotion which Lacey is able to draw from the five recorders required by the composer. “

Australia’s Journal of Recorder and Early Music, No 19, 1995

“she and Robert Chamberlain cope as impressively with the epic as with the miniature....”

“(they) treat its (Grieg Violin Sonata no 1) stylistic challenges as if they did not exist. They also excel in the marvellous Nielsen work (Violin sonata no 1)...”

“Chamberlain’s admirably assured pianism....”

Soundscapes magazine, October/November 1995

“Robert Chamberlain was equally skilled and dedicated, drawing together Debussy’s fleeting changes of mood to form a satisfying structure, rhythmically poised and effortless.”

Herald Sun, August 1994

“Chamberlain is one of this town’s most sympathetic accompanists...”

Herald Sun, July 1997

“This was an excellent performance: direct and crisp, a persuasive meshing of both instruments, authoritatively differentiating between languor and purposeful activity.”

The Age, August 1994
